Background

Every company undoubtedly wants its business to grow. Collaboration between companies or multi-company setups is becoming an increasingly dominant trend. However, this type of business relationship is often overshadowed by trust issues, particularly concerning expenses.

Goals

This website aims to identify and record expenditures, which are key factors contributing to trust issues in the financial aspects of companies operating within a multi-company scheme. Additionally, the website seeks to explore these trust issues in relation to the strategic and operational financial decisions made by the companies.

Conclusion

This website can help users, especially companies with a multi-company structure. However, it can also function well for businesses with branches or non-profit organizations that have one or more departments.
